Food for Thought

Food for Thought is an interactive full one-day event geared towards introducing middle school students in the Huntington Fairfield Community to NASA’s “Advanced Astroculture” technology for plant growth in a microgravity environment. The residents of the Fairfield community are predominately minorities and economically disadvantaged, with science proficiencies lower than the average for the State of West Virginia. The goal is to provide hands-on education experiences for youth of the Fairfield Huntington Community to ignite an interest in STEM.
